

Nichola

Nichola lives next door to Bryony and like Bryony is aware that her home is very vulnerable as the cliff edge gets nearer.

She says that the house used to belong to her parents before they died and she has long, fond memories of living there.

She was originally within the first phase of compensation (Phase A) but was downgraded to Phase B which was then withdrawn.

She finds the situation unnerving and is under no illusion that she will lose the house without any compensation.

She confides that two sets of neighbours have divorced over recent years due to the stress of finding their only asset had collapsed in value and their ability to move dramatically restricted.

She lost both her parents and her husband within a few years of each other recently. The insurance received after their deaths was bittersweet as she has bought a small property close to the lighthouse and away from the "danger zone" which will provide income through rental until she has to move there.

"I have to keep cheerful for the sake of my children, so I laugh a lot – otherwise I would cry"